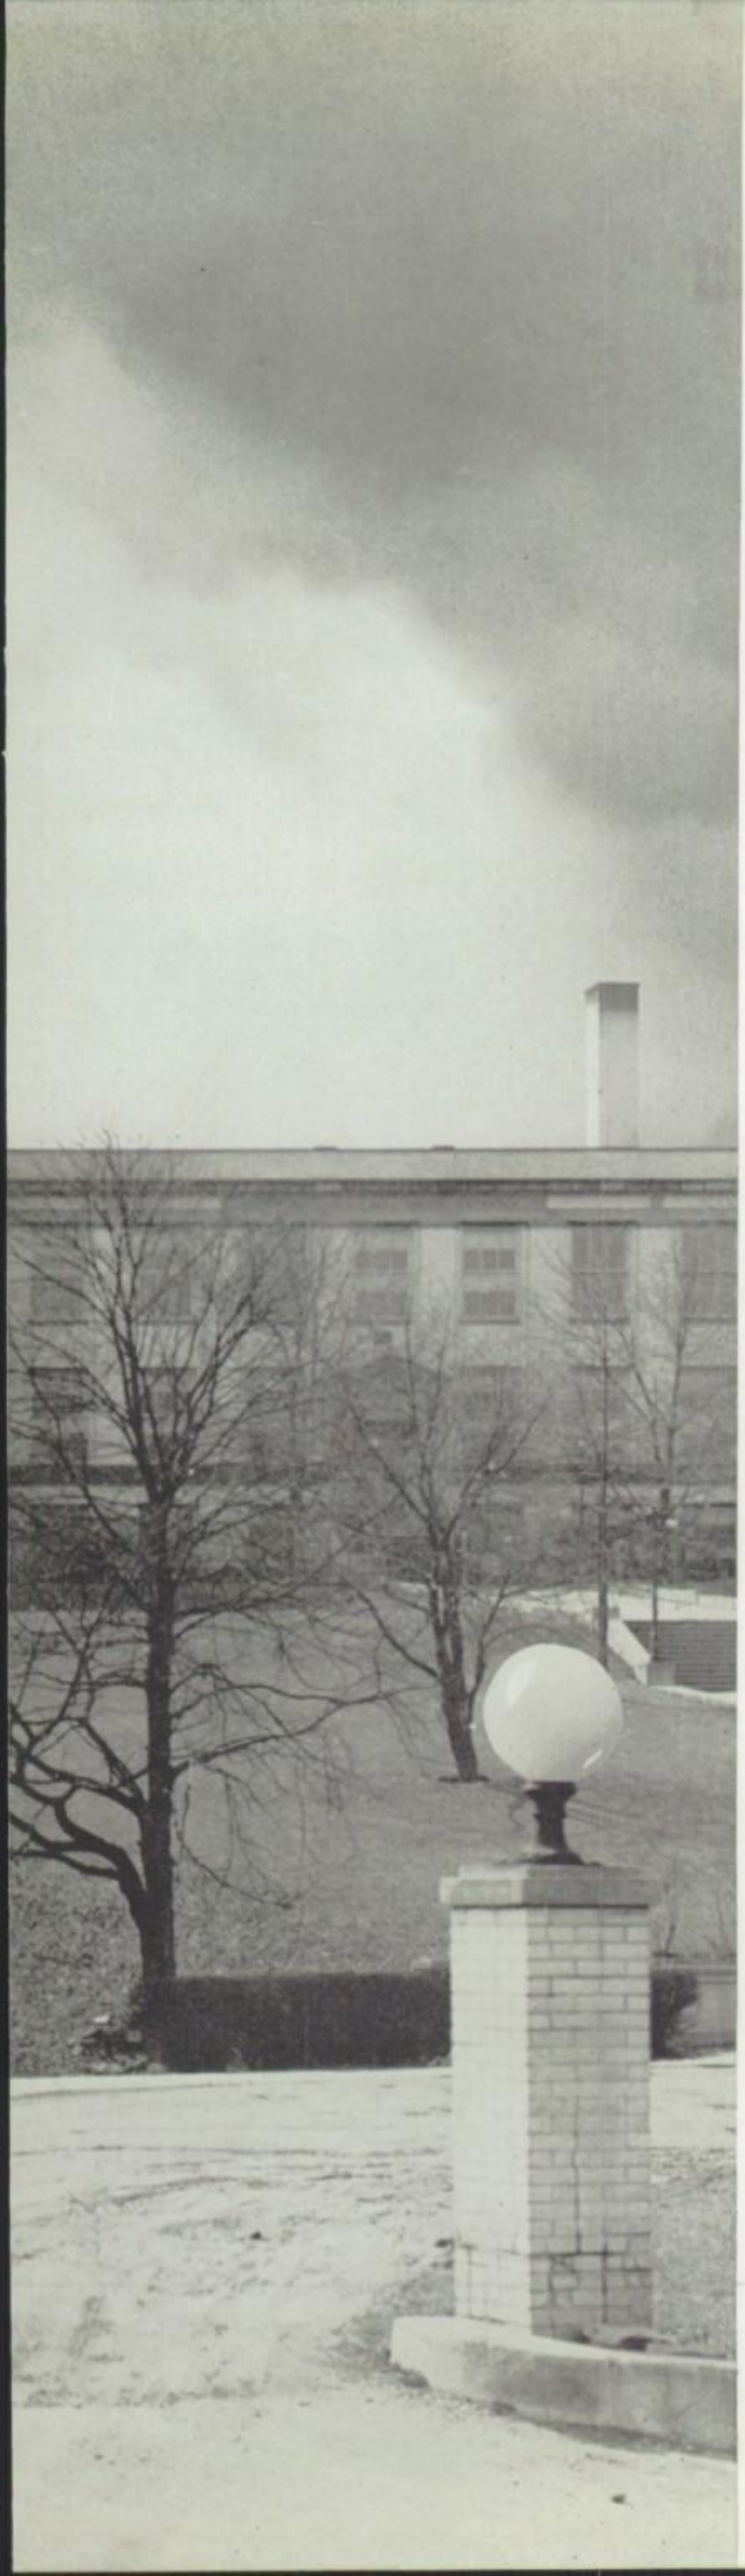
The American Way...

AS WE LIVE IT TODAY . . .

AT NORWIN HIGH SCHOOL

IS TOLD IN THE 1942

NORWIN



THE spirit of Patrick Henry is typical of the American Way, as is the educational system of the United States, which we believe is exemplified by our high school and its students of Norwin in this year of 1942 . . . we leave you now so you can look at the following pages . . . with satisfaction in your hearts . . .

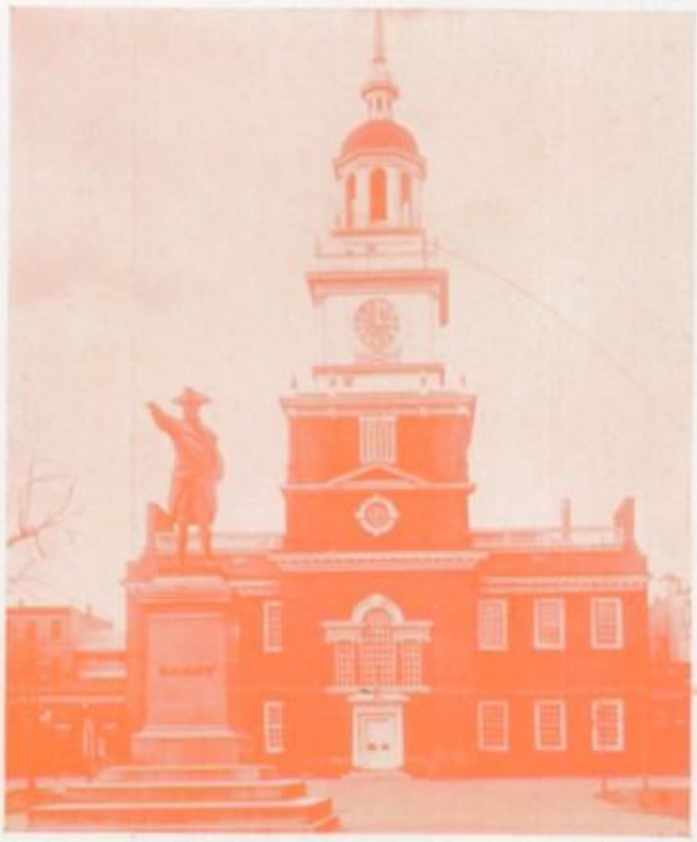
BOOK THREE

School athletics develop character

VOLUME ONE

1942 will live in all our memories as the year when "Remember Pearl Harbor" and "Keep 'em flying" were the slogans on everyone's lips; and for the class of '42, it will be remembered as the year of graduation from Norwin High School. The importance of this year, then, will be inestimable to those seniors who must leave these "sheltering portals fair" to take their places in a world which America is striving to make free for everyone. So, to the grand American Way, loved by us all, we dedicate this annual as a record of four years happily spent at Norwin.



THE ADMINISTRATION

The administration of Norwin High School has established a policy of democracy in the school which has become one of its chief assets. The administrative leaders have also placed Norwin wholeheartedly behind the national defense program, pledging the full co-operation of both students and faculty.

Superintendent of Schools, Carl C. Pearsall, has contributed much toward progressiveness at Norwin. He has introduced ideas typifying the modern trend in education and has guided the patriotic endeavors of the student body in the nation's best interests.

Principal John W. Clawson has always enthusiastically promoted democracy at Norwin. He referred many problems in school government directly to the pupils, permitting them to voice their own opinions. In this way, students had a part in charting their own courses at Norwin.

Mr. Pearsall and Mr. Clawson inspect the shop.

The Norwin Board of Education, reflecting the interest of the parents in the education of American youth, has made many improvements in the school program and, despite handicaps, has successfully coped with problems arising from the national emergency.

The school board realizes that to make our democracy strong, the students must be taught those principles which develop the spirit that is known as the "American Way." They know that the graduates of today will be the leaders of tomorrow and they strive to make those students good Americans in every sense of the word.

Serving as president of the school board is Dr. John Kifer. He is assisted by Vice-President George Watkiss, and Earl Painter, Secretary.

Norwin students like their teachers because of their live personalities and because of the interest they display in their pupils. This interest is evinced in classes, at social events, and in informal gatherings. Better understanding and a closer relationship between teacher and student results from these contacts.

In a year that has seen new instructors replace long familiar teachers, we students have made many lasting friendships among the newcomers. However, we have not forgotten those who guided us through the past four years at Norwin. They were not merely our teachers, but were also our good friends and counselors.

KNOWLEDGE - JUSTICE . . .

Miss Rylander, a "must" on every student's list of friends, was efficient and helpful as office secretary . . . Mrs. Trombley found both history and biology so absorbing that she could not decide which was her favorite . . . The adventures of "The Last of the Mohicans" and the mystery in "The House of Seven Gables" initiated juniors into Miss Gallagher's English classes . . . Mr. Guthrie succeeded in making geography a fascinating subject . . . Miss Allshouse kept Norwin girls the picture of health with a variety of exciting gym games . . . Miss McMaster both taught and entertained her students in shorthand classes . . . To bring out hidden talent in art students was the job of capable Miss Odell . . . Miss Buehn spoke French so fluently that her classes thoroughly enjoyed hearing her read "Sans Famille" . . . Many students admired the versatility of Mr. Wolfe, a master craftsman in industrial arts . . .

Several chemistry students work an experiment under the supervision of Mr. Trombley.

Mr. Hunt assists students delving into the mysteries of physics.

Shirley Ocker, Carrena Auckerman, and Mary Boyd prepare tasty dishes in the home economics room.

Plane geometry and Latin were taught by Paul Brown who translated Caesar and Pythagoras with equal dexterity . . . Miss Hershey's classes featured discussions of world history from the beginning of time to the latest news flashes . . . The mysteries of algebra and general science were untangled for freshmen by Mr. Mullerschoen . . . Mrs. Schwartz's sophomores studied etiquette and grammar with the same vigor with which they attacked "The Tale of Two Cities" . . . Smiling Mr. Evans made civics students "see the light" . . . Many young scientists were intrigued by physics experiments conducted by Mr. Hunt . . . Miss Painter's history classes studied American patriots from Patrick Henry to Colin Kelly with increasing admiration for "The American Way" . . . Music students discovered Mr. Hetrick to be a walking library of musical information as well as a very busy man.

Olga Kobasa
Clark McClelland

Mr. Cole executed his duties in the shop with an ease and efficiency which won him the admiration of the boys . . . Miss Jones made mathematics seem a concise system of logical solutions instead of a jumbled mass of figures . . . Seniors and freshmen quickly learned to use the correct form of "who" and "whom" in Miss Kobasa's English classes . . .

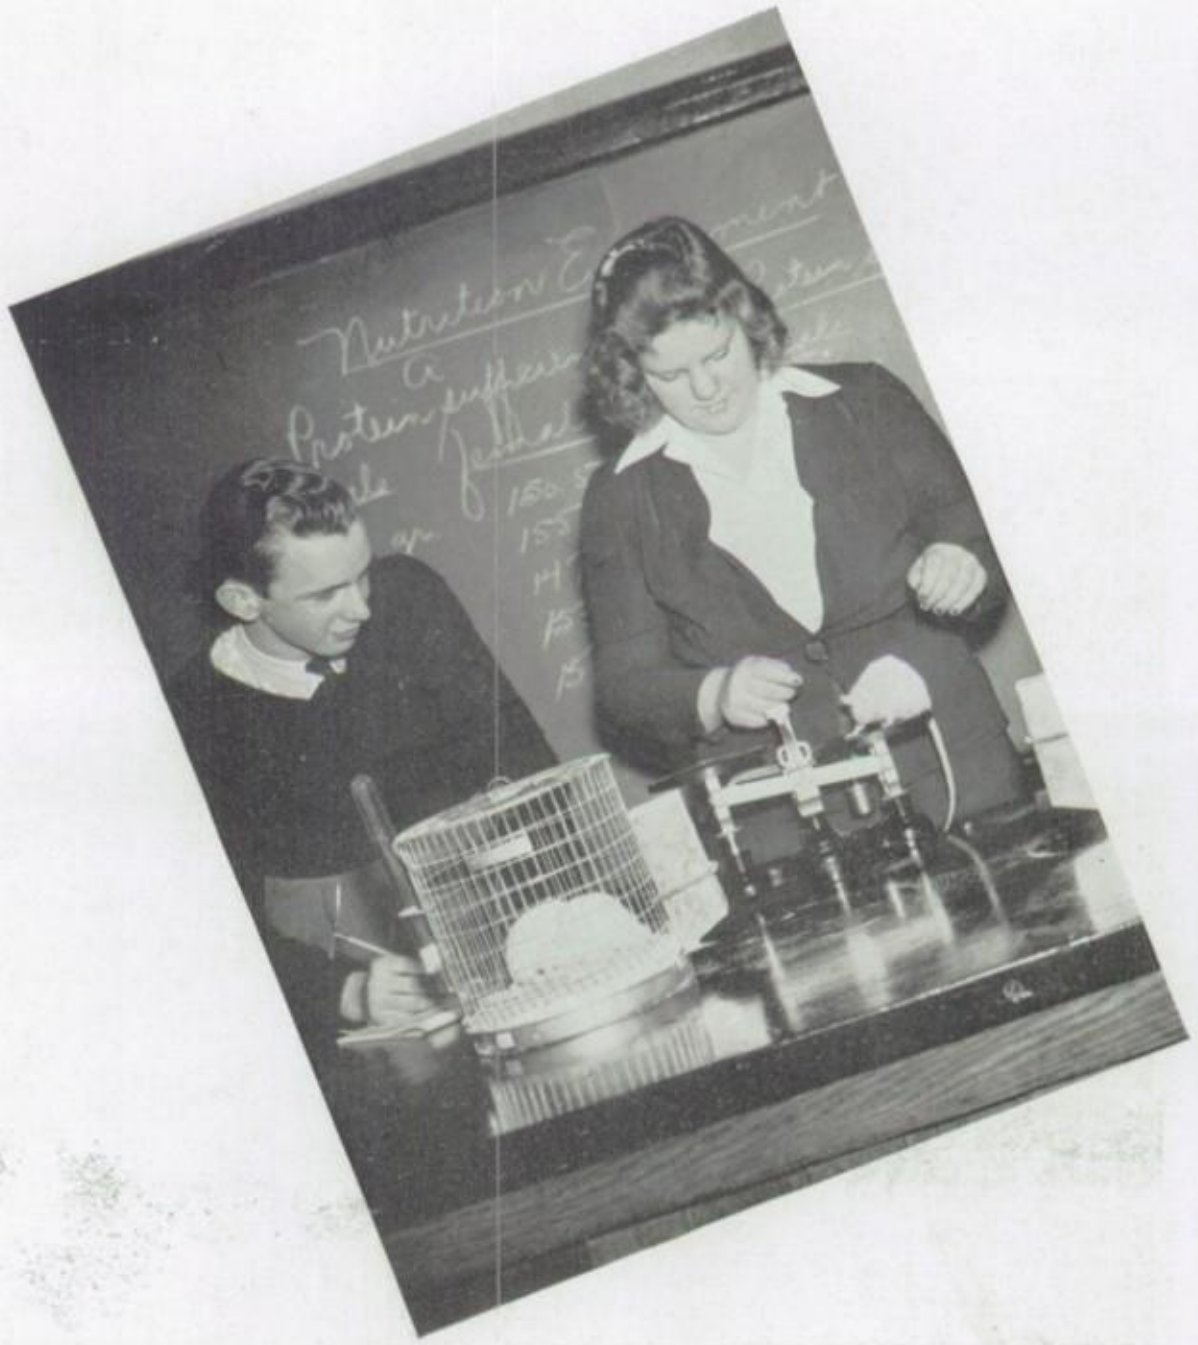
Howard Trombley
Carrie Sowash
Marquis Patterson
Charles Shirley

TOLERANCE - TRUTH . . .

Clark McClelland was tops in sports and did his best to make the students tops also . . . "Ivanhoe" and "Lady of the Lake," read by Miss Ramsey, made her English classes grand adventures . . . "Chief" Trombley mixed jokes with experiments to make chemistry amusing to the senior "scientist" . . . Many thanks are due Miss Sowash for her help in selecting books for us and for keeping the library a place of inspiration . . . Senior English students claimed that "Mark" Patterson knew the history of every poet from Milton to Sandburg . . . To his juniors Mr. Shirley presented stirring pictures of heroes in American history.

Hensberger, Whitehead, and Sofaly working on their masterpieces.

A peaceful scene in the library any afternoon



Biology students Eldon Carlson and Margaret Osborne weighing the white rats

Under the direction of Miss Norberg, Norwin's home economics department has turned out many excellent cooks and seamstresses . . . Miss Sounders hoped to provide the world with an ideal stenographer as evidenced by her patient methods in shorthand . . . Admirable David Brown prepared students for the business world so we need have no fear of a lack of good accountants . . . Nothing pleased Mr. McMunn so much as a tricky math problem. He would let the students argue and then show 'em how it was done . . . Typing sixty words a minute was a sure way to please Miss Santner . . . Mrs. Kerner helped prepare future Americans by instructing seniors in problems of democracy . . . Men of tutored the boys in mechanical drawing . . . The habits of life and customs of the ancients were taught by Miss Rackley in history and Latin.

QUEEN NORWIN V . . .

KATHRYN DONEGAN—Queen of the Hop

Every year the publication staffs sponsor a Christmas Hop and the senior class selects a queen to reign over the dance. This year petite Kathryn Donegan held the distinction of being queen and had as her attendants Evelyn Shuster and Regina Hudon.

OUR FOUR YEARS OF LEADERSHIP

It was in the fall of 1938 that Norwin High School welcomed the Senior Class of 1942. As freshmen, the members were inexperienced, but soon made new friends and elected their first class officers: Thomas Davis, president; John Ed, vice president; and Jean Weber, secretary. The first social function of the year was the Freshman-Sophomore Party.

For the remaining three years at Norwin, the task of leading the class was entrusted to Jack Johnson, president; Clifford Taylor, vice president; and Jane Wyncoop, secretary.

During the junior year, class rings were received and the annual Junior Prom was held on May sixteenth.

Highlights of the senior year were the presentation of the Senior Class Play and extensive preparations for commencement exercises.

After four eventful years at Norwin with many classmen participating in musical and social activities, dramatics, athletics, and publications, the Senior Class bids farewell to its beloved Alma Mater.

Clifford Taylor, vice-president; David Brown, class adviser; Jane Wyncoop, secretary; Jack Johnson, president

NINTH GRADE

The ninth grade of Irwin Junior High School began the year by electing officers. The new president was Albert Runt, with Joan Zetter as vice-president, and Virginia Rosendahl as secretary.

Club and social activities were successfully started and kept ninth graders busy. Art, Choral, and Press Clubs were organized, and the Girls' Chorus replenished. The ninth grade sponsored a Hallowe'en party, a skating party, and to end a memorable year, held a jolly farewell dance.

Notes and more notes!

VOLUME TWO . . .

NORWIN students are deeply interested in a variety of extra-curricular activities. The clubs, musical organizations, and publications staffs claim many members who are becoming versatile and well-informed Amercians. These activities, we feel, help promote the democratic spirit in the school by enabling the students to do many things well, thus giving them a feeling of well-being and poise, necessary to future citizens who will be expected to contribute to their nation's welfare.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS . . .

The Norwin Publications played an important part in the lives of the students for many were members of either business or editorial staffs.

"Have you bought your annual yet?" was the query so often heard from members of both yearbook staffs. This year, as in previous years, the book was published without aid of advertising. The only outside financial help received was in the form of a patron list. Under the supervision of Miss Painter, the Yearbook had Eleanor Clawson as editor-in-chief assisted by the literary editor, Louis Kober and the mechanical editor, Jeanne McHugh. Wayne Cashdollar was the business manager.

Once every two weeks at dismissal, an observer might have noticed students ambling through the halls engrossed in their copies of the Norwin Bi-Weekly. The very efficient staff of this newspaper, under the supervision of Mr. Paul Brown, spent hours writing, proof reading, and setting the type for this four-page publication. The Bi-Weekly was edited by Howard Bullock assisted by Jennie Mae Mistero as news editor. Lorraine Peters held the position of feature editor. The business staff was captained by Ruth Frisk with Robert Dunn aiding as advertising manager. Calvin Millen served as circulation manager.

FOR A BETTER AMERICA . . .

Norwin has consistently included in its schedule, activities which have done much to develop characteristics of leadership in its youth. Ranking high among such organizations have been the Hi-Y, the Tri-Hi-Y, and the Lettermen's Clubs.

This past year the Hi-Y and the Tri-Hi-Y have shared many activities. They alternately read the Bible in assembly, decorated the school very beautifully at Christmas time, and enjoyed joint parties.

The Hi-Y boys have had a very active year collecting Red Cross donations, planning assembly programs, and taking their usual places directing congested hall traffic. The members elected Jack Johnson to lead them as president, Arthur Weaver as vice president, and Rudy Stankus as secretary. Their new adviser was Mr. Hermann Muellershoen.

The Tri-Hi-Y was headed by president, Ruth Frisk; vice president, Eleanor Clawson; recording secretary, Jane Wyncoop; corresponding secretary, Vivien Sensenich; and treasurer, Kathryn Darby. The club had a successful year both financially and socially. Induction services for new members, packing Christmas baskets, collecting Tuberculosis funds, preparing a Mother's Day program, and planning for hikes, skating, and swimming parties were some of the duties which kept the girls "stepping." The Tri-Hi-Y advisers were Miss Jones and Miss Ramsey.

The Lettermen's Club was organized for boys outstanding in athletics. Its purpose was to create good sportsmanship and fellowship among Norwin's athletes. Each year the Club sponsors the "Lettermen's Ball," usually held in April. This year the club also gave Norwin athletic teams the new name of "Blue Devils." The Lettermen's officers were Edward Wichrowski, president; Walter Plank, vice president; Tony Krotz, secretary. Their adviser was Mr. David Brown.

The international honorary society of the Quill and Scroll is an organization which encourages high school journalists by giving them a definite goal for which to work. Each year, the society carefully chooses several senior journalists who have proved their capability in the field of journalism. The seniors selected for membership in the Quill and Scroll this year were Eleanor Clawson, Louis Kober, Jack Johnson, Lorraine Peters, Jennie Mae Mistero, and Howard Bullock. Mrs. Isabel Kerner served as the adviser.

MUSIC IN THE AIR . . .

Rhythm, mixed voices, and harmonious chords testify to the talents of the lads and lassies of Norwin. Our finest musicians are found in the various musical organizations. The boys who are talented in singing have been organized into a group known as the Boys' Glee Club. These boys, consisting of members from the four classes, furnished excellent music for assemblies, the operetta H. M. S. Pinafore, and commencement.

The well blended voices of a mixed chorus formed another group, the A Cappella. This formal music group, under the direction of Mr. Hetrick, participated in chapel programs and sang for clubs and activities of various kinds.

The Norwin band met the demand for music of a stirring nature and was popular at school festivities. It efficiently carried out its foremost duty of playing at football games, where its appearance added color and zest to the occasion.

After the football season rolled away, the band yielded the musical stage to the orchestra. In the operetta H. M. S. Pinafore, the orchestra gave a noteworthy performance and closed the season by playing at Commencement exercises. Since the orchestra favored classics, it helped to make Norwin students familiar with the finest type of music.

FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY . . .

The primary purpose of several clubs at Norwin has been to promote the individual talents of various students.

Since such a large number of girls were interested in group singing during the past year, Mr. Hetrick decided to divide them, calling the older group the "A" chorus and the younger the "B" chorus. The main function of the former was to help provide music for the annual Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. They also sang at the Thanksgiving and Christmas Assemblies and ended the season by performing at the baccalaureate and commencement services. The girls in the "B" chorus met once a week in the music room. They did not appear publicly in a group but aided in the presentation of the operetta as ushers.

The Norwin Debating Club, discontinued ten years ago, was reorganized by Miss Olga Kobasa. During the first semester the members learned the fundamentals of debating. Later Norwin's entrance into the Pennsylvania Forensic League entitled our debaters to participate in county, district, and state contests. The question of peacetime compulsory military training was debated with a number of other district schools. Acting as president of the club was James Helman, with Carl Zona as vice-president, and Betty Flanigan as secretary.

Outstanding typists from the junior class were organized into the Junior Typing Club by Miss Santner. This club consisted of a large group of skilled typists whose aim was greater typing skill. Awards were given to those excelling in speed tests. The typists elected Ross Walton as their president; Betty Seton, vice president; Jane Lunn, secretary; and Martha Brown, treasurer.

GOOD TIMES . . . FRIENDS

The sophomore play, directed by Miss Barnard, was entitled "Who Gets the Car Tonight?" This popular playlet has been presented several times at Norwin but no one knows yet who got the car. Ah, well! It's a small matter. The sophomore actors were Bruce Robinson, Lila Stickel, Joan Bricker, Fred Lunt, and Eldon Carlson.

The Senior Class play, Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," will linger long in the memories of both cast and audience as a very noteworthy production. Applause to Mr. Marquis Patterson for his untiring work with our Senior Thespians . . . one of the brighter memories in the scrapbook of the class of '42.

The regrettable thing about graduating is that we must leave all our friends, never seeing many of them again. Friends, both teachers and pupils, have made the days at Norwin bright and unforgettable.

. . . HAPPY MEMORIES

The janitors are friends to whom we owe a great deal of gratitude. It must have required a lot of patience to keep the school clean with so many of us around. All the students appreciate this fact and say "thanks" to them.

The traditional Christmas Hop, sponsored by the two publication staffs, has always been one of the major social events of the Norwin year. This year Jerry Gray and his orchestra were featured. Huge white snowflakes dangled from the ceiling and shiny polar bears, Eskimoes, and Santa Clauses on the walls created a holiday atmosphere.

It was super-collossal! Gigantic! We mean, of course, the annual Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. This year it was "H. M. S. Pinafore," presented by Mr. Hetrick's music department on February 26 and 27 . . . lilting songs, large cast, delightful comedy. We hope Norwin has more G. and S. in the future.

So, it's goodbye to the dear old Alma Mater . . . but we don't leave Norwin empty-handed. We have our memories.

HOBBIES FOR PLEASURE . . .

Among Norwin's many organizations were those which offered hobbies to the students. These clubs provided both entertainment and practical experience in various fields.

The purpose of the Camera Club was not only to teach its members the technique of taking photographs, but also to acquaint them with the processes of developing and printing their own snapshots. The club, as in previous years, was under the able guidance of Mr. Trombley. Bill Weaver capably served as president, while the vice-president was Jim Soukup and the secretary, Joan Yoney.

Another very active organization this past year, was the new Commercial Art Club which was organized by Miss Odell. The members of this club took upon themselves the duty of making posters advertising the senior play, the Christmas Hop, and the basketball games. In addition they made a study of color schemes, still life drawings, and in general studied the uses of art in the commercial field. Presiding at their meetings was Betty Rose assisted by Margaret Williams, the secretary.

Ten girls, acting as aides to our school librarian, Miss Sowash, did valuable work which earned for them student appreciation. They pasted and mended books, typed and filed material, and arranged displays and bulletin boards.

During the past seven years the Theta Epsilon Gamma has been one of the most outstanding clubs at Norwin. Its purpose has been to provide a means for organizing all senior girls interested in home economics. When, at the end of the first semester, Miss Norberg, home economics teacher, took a leave of absence, her position was filled by Miss Corrin, who automatically became the T.E.G. faculty adviser. The club officers were Thelma Cipra, president; Margaret Griffith, secretary; and Madeline Gombas, treasurer.

VARIETY IN ACTIVITIES . . .

Because student energies must be directed into many varied channels, Norwin included in its list of activities the rifle club which provides skilled outdoor and indoor competition, and the radio club which delves into a fascinating and absorbing hobby. Then, too, student leaders were organized and developed into responsible cheerleaders who directed cheering at major athletic contests while drum majorettes injected color and life into our marching band.

From a modest beginning, Norwin's rifle club became an organization of a hundred boys and girls. After the members had learned proper care and use of firearms, they traveled to the Hahntown rifle range several nights weekly and concentrated on target shooting. A feature of target practice was an elimination tournament with boy and girl divisions. The best shots comprised Norwin's rifle team. The team and club were directed by Mr. Shirley.

War restrictions upon the use of private sets prevented the radio club from operating its station at Norwin as it had done in the past. However, aided by the addition of new equipment, including a transmitter, the radio "hams" were able to carry out an otherwise normal program. Adviser Hermann Muellerschoen concentrated upon a study of radio fundamentals and the Morse code.

Cheerleaders, who organize and develop school spirit at athletic contests, must be of exceptional ability and training. So this year a group of upperclassmen were chosen to lead our teams "down that field" with Norwin yells and songs.

High stepping drum majorettes were an important part of our band. Leading the march in parades or at half-time maneuvers, Norwin majorettes gave impressive performances. The girls were instructed in their drills and formations by Jimmy Weaver, the band leader.

Junior varsity football and golf fall into the minor sports category here at the Blue and Gold. They have both been organized sports during the last year with favorable results.

Junior football was revived this past year following its collapse a few seasons ago. Charles Shirley, a new addition to the faculty, coached the yearlings and did a commendable job of teaching the lads fundamentals. The squad played four games during the season, losing them all. However, it is felt that the experience acquired will help to produce valuable material for future varsity squads.

In past years golf teams were organized to meet the problem of spring athletics, and this year has been no exception. Schade, Uhlig, Dunn, Hockensmith, and Wampler were valuable holdovers from the previous season. Uhlig and Dunn are serving their final year. The squad was again coached by Roy McMunn.

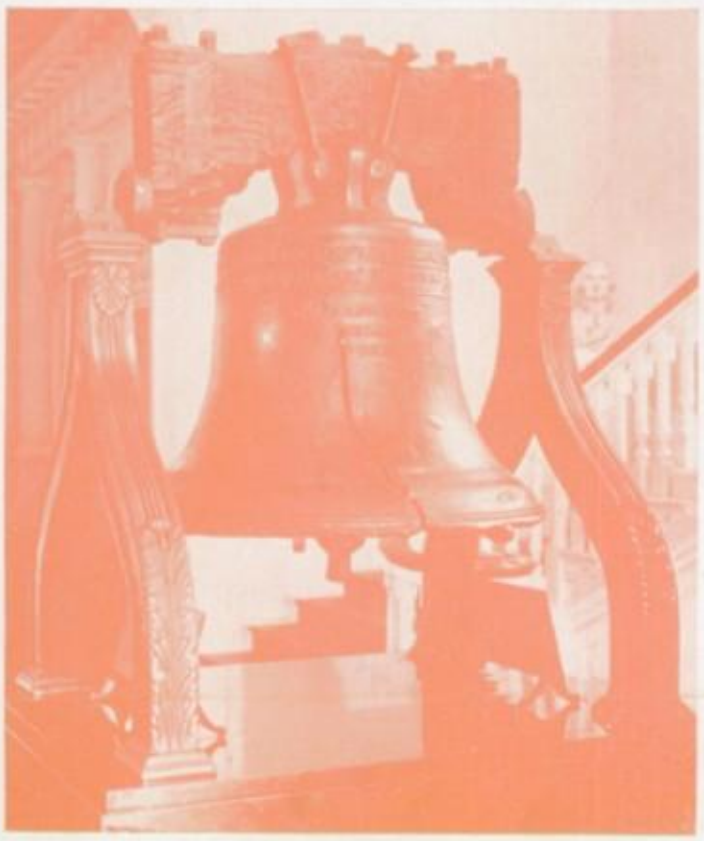
VOLUME THREE . . .

IN this historic year, as "V for Victory" becomes our watchword and the picture of the minuteman our insignia, Norwin goes on with its athletic program to increase the good health and energies of Norwinites; to strengthen their character and develop good sportsmanship. Just as Americanism is displayed in the classroom and in activities, so it shows itself on the basketball floor and the football gridiron. The keen thrill of competition and the will to win are a fundamental part of the American way. . .



PIGSKIN GRIDDERS

Roy H. McMunn, a former Washington and Jefferson end, became Norwin's head football coach at the outset of last season, after having served as assistant coach and athletic director for several years. Clark McClelland was named assistant coach and Charles Shirley, a newcomer in our midst, served as junior varsity coach.

In spite of numerous handicaps, the new mentor tackled the job with typical expert enthusiasm. At the beginning of the season, a number of skeptics were taken aback when they saw the Blue Devil eleven in action. The gridders turned in two creditable performances against Greensburg and Monessen, our strongest rivals this past season. However, at the completion of the schedule, the local boys had lost all seven of their AA tilts.

Although this record seems discouraging, we as students are anything but downhearted. Well liked by the student body and squad, the new coaching staff has given rise to an improved spirit which will undoubtedly make for better football teams in the future.

Three of our warriors received outside recognition for their efforts. Hursh and Wichrowski copped positions on the all-county second team while Bozich garnered honorable mention. These same boys also played in a post season all-county game. Fourteen boys will be lost next season through graduation and ineligibility.

The staring line up usually read as follows: Harris and J. Cuccaro or C. Cuccaro at the wing posts, Wichrowski and Tharp at tackle, Hursh and McNelly at guard, Orell at the pivot, Bozich and Proctor or Fomich at the halves, Eves at quarter, and Kober in the fullback slot.

PRESENTING THE

Coach McClelland

The 1941-42 varsity basketball season closed on February 28 after an up-and-down series of games by the Norwin five. The Blue Devil quintet wound up its second consecutive year in the cellar of Section IX. Though the squad was a veteran outfit, the boys failed to come up to local expectations.

Clark McClelland piloted the cagers for his fifth and final year. Due to McClelland's acceptance of a civil service job with the army late in the season, Jim Wolfe, who has had a wealth of experience in local court circles, took over the controls until the finale.

Regardless of the record of two games won and ten lost in section competition, the Norwin five played several never-to-be-forgotten tilts. Connellsville was the opponent on one such occasion, the final score being 32-30 in the Coker's favor. In another thriller, Jeannette fell before the locals in a high-tension 30-26 affair. One non-section game which kept the fans on their feet was the 34-32 overtime defeat of the Blue Devils on their home floor at the hands of North Belle Vernon. Norwin was eliminated from the county tournament in the first play off, losing to Greensburg 36-31.

In spite of this season's losses, the outlook for next year is optimistic. The 1942-43 club will be a veteran outfit from the start. With such seasoned players as Johnston, Shea, Carroll, Clarke and Anderson returning, plus virtually the entire Irwin Junior High aggregation, a great ball club may be produced. Irwin's Junior W.P.I.A.L. championship squad will send such boys as Buckley, Abraham, Kifer, and Reynolds to bolster the returning varsity.

Several valuable seniors will be lost through graduation. High-scoring Ray Siegel, who finished the season with 103 points, as well as Walter Plank, defensive ace, will be hard to replace. Uhlig, Taylor, and Filtz, all of whom showed streaks of basketball ability, will also be graduated.

INTRAMURAL COMPETITIONS

Norwin's gym and health classes for boys assumed an air of seriousness this year in view of our country's war crisis. Both classes were revised in an attempt to train students to meet emergencies.

The gym classes themselves were not so different from those of other years—fundamentally, at least. There was one noticeable change, however. Calisthenics became more prominent as a measure for keeping the boys in excellent physical condition. A program was set up in order to supply exercise for all the muscles of the body. There were push-ups, bending exercises, running in place, and a variety of others. As the year progressed, the calisthenics became more exhaustive and difficult but the students were more able to stand them.

Basketball held its place at the top of the "games" list. Although the game was not played in a strictly orthodox manner, it remained the favorite of the classes. Badminton, volleyball, and fencing played minor roles in the gym curricula. During the warmer days of spring, soft ball was played outdoors. There were few classes in the open, however.

In health class, a decided change was noticeable. First aid, based upon information supplied by the American Red Cross, was taught almost exclusively. To teach boys to remain calm in an emergency and to render first aid when necessary became the foremost aim of the health program.

This year instead of merely learning the integral parts of the body, students placed emphasis upon their functions and how to care for them. Such things as bleeding, shock, broken bones and poisoning were discussed in detail during recitations.

If every high school has done as much for its boys as has ours in the past year, we may rest assured that America's men of the future will be strong in mind and body, able to take care of themselves, and to face a crisis calmly.

NORWIN SPORTSWOMEN

To get all the sports enthusiasts started for a year of interclass and individual competition, hockey was introduced as the first sport. The seniors won the championship by a very close margin, the other three classes showing stiff competition.

The Girls' Leaders Club, supervised by Miss Allshouse, began to get actively under way in January. Bernadine Higgins was elected president, Mary Smith vice-president; and Pat Siebert, secretary-treasurer. The membership of the club numbered fourteen, consisting of eight seniors, four juniors and two sophomores. These girls officiated at games and worked in the shower-room and gym.

Basketball was the next sport introduced with the seniors again winning the championship. Volleyball and mushball were close followers of basketball in the interclass line.

Ping-pong, badminton, tennis, and archery were offered as individual sports. Tournaments, in which many girls participated, were held to determine the title holder for each sport.

With the completion of these sports, a full program of much enjoyment and enthusiasm ended until next year's fans light the torch and keep it burning for another year.
